A cancer diagnosis can be an overwhelming experience for patients and their families. Just managing treatment and the many life changes that occur can consume large amounts of physical and emotional energy.

An important part of a patient’s cancer treatment is managing symptoms and side effects. The Supportive Care Clinic helps patients cope with the stress of cancer.

Led by our dedicated nurse navigator, our team of physicians, nurses, dietitians, pharmacists and other support staff help patients minimize the side effects of treatment, including pain, fatigue, weight loss, constipation, difficulty sleeping, as well as mental and emotional symptoms such as confusion, depression and anxiety.

The clinic can help patients with any type of cancer, during any point of treatment.
